Accredited online interior design degree programs

There are many online interior design degree programs, but only a few are recognized by the American Society of Interior Designers (ASID), the professional organization for interior designers. The ASID is not an accrediting body. The Council for Interior Design (CIDA) is the only professional accrediting body for interior design schools and so far has only accredited two online programs. The Academy of Art University is a CIDA accredited school and offers through its School of Interior Architecture & Design degrees in Interior Architecture and Design with a focus on areas of commercial, hospitality, residential and sustainable designs. Your coursework is made up of online instructional videos, audio engaged slideshows, instructors are connected to the interior design industry, videos of interviews with field experts, instructors provide you with real time feedback and marks ups on your submitted works. You can have real time conversations with classmates and see what they have created. Master of Fine Arts (MFA): The Master's degree core curriculum integrates theory, design, and technology. Bachelor of Fine Arts (BFA): 132 semester units. Once approved, the final project is exhibited professionally. Second Degree Program (BFA): Students with existing Bachelor degrees can complete an additional 66 units for a second BA degree. Associate of Arts (AA): This is an excellent degree choice for entry-level positions with design firms and companies. Online tuition for the Academy of Art University is the same as "in-person courses" minus lab fees. Application fee: $50 Enrollment fee: $95 Course Fees: $400 average per semester Materials/Supplies: $540 per semester Total Annual Online Undergraduate Tuition: $26,399 Rocky Mountain College of Art and Design (RMCAD) offers just one online CIDA accredited degree. You will receive a Bachelor of Fine Arts in Interior Design (BFA) degree at the completion of your degree program. The design disciplines you'll study include architecture, graphic design, environmental design, and industrial design. The college's learning management system provides you with a strong artistic and technical knowledge base for learning the principles of interior design with sustainable design specialization. Your online coursework difficulty is a gradual build up that allows you to accumulate the necessary skills as you move from one module to the next. Your degree is different from many interior design schools since it has a heavy focus on sustainable design with the goal of being environmentally responsible in your designs. You will have the guidance and instruction of the online faculty who are practicing industry professionals. Their expertise provides you with hands on real world experience that is an invaluable learning experience from mentors and instructors. The online tuition can be paid with a four-month payment plan. Online Programs: $444 per credit hour (does not include books and other fees) There is a one-time application processing fee of $50 Program fee: $990 per semester Yorkville University formerly Radlo College of Canada (RCC Institute of Technology) offers an online Bachelor of Interior Design degree program. The program is accredited by the CIDA, ARIDO (Association of Registered Interior Designers of Ontario) and IDC (Interior Designers of Canada). The degree program offers hands-on training by professionals who have experience in the industry. When completed, you are eligible to sit for the National Council of Interior Design Qualification (NCIDQ) exam. This certification is required in some Canadian regions. You can participate in the accelerated program and complete your coursework in three years or less. Your coursework will provide you with the interior design industry standard knowledge and design skills. You'll advance via internship work, volunteer work, and ultimately creation of your portfolio. You have access to a 24/7 tutoring support. The online tuition is given in Canadian dollars (CAD). The total cost of your degree program is $69,300 (subject to change with any changes announced three months before the term begins). Other fees not included in the tuition include textbooks, equipment, expendable supplies, and resource fees. The fees stated are in Canadian dollars (CAD). These online degree programs have several advantages since they are approved by the ASID however, that doesn't mean you're limited to just these online offerings. There are many other legitimate and worthy online programs that you may wish to explore before committing to a specific online degree program. Decide what type of design you wish to pursue and then select the program that will best support you in obtaining your goals. When comparing programs, look for ones that will train you well enough that as soon as you graduate, you'll be capable of stepping into a designer position. While you'll have a learning curve that can only be met through on-the-job experience, joining professional organizations such as ASID will give you opportunities to network with other people within your profession and continue learning your craft. You have three outstanding choices of online interior design schools with different degree options. When you undertake an online degree program, you have the opportunity to work at your own pace. © 2022 LoveToKnow Media. All rights reserved. Looking up from this computer screen you might notice in any space around you, the work of interior designers. What they do, and what they have inspired is everywhere. On TV, on the newsstand, in buildings, on roof decks, and maybe even in your own home, interior designers help create the spaces that we live, shop, and eat in and even where we go to the doctor. If you find yourself doodling a remodel of your kitchen obsessively, or creating online mood boards for home decor, then you have come to the right place. Maybe your thing is popping into open houses in your neighborhood and leaving comment cards full of ideas for the home stagers to consider for next time. Either way, obtaining an online interior design degree may be worth exploring. With so many online options right at your fingertips, it also may be closer and more accessible than you think. What is Interior Design? Interior Design is a growing industry that is full of art, math, and imagination. The growth of this field in the last 15 years is in no small part due to HGTV hit shows like Fixer Upper and Flip or Flop. With media encouragement to turn any space into a beautiful space, people are catching the design bug. Even though design is a skill needed everywhere, some of the best interior design schools in the world are right here in the United States. The Bureau of Labor and Statistics predict that between 2017 and 2026 interior design job will grow by nearly 3,000. This means thousands more Johanna Gains' and Christina El Moussa's. While you may not be the next design superstar streaming into people's living rooms, you could quickly and easily become the next design superstar for a family or business. The non-entertaining elements of an interior designer's day include reading blueprints, adhering to building and safety codes, relearning the new update of design software, and making the fifth color palette change for picky customers. Something that creative designers of public spaces must stay aware of is the requirement for people with disabilities to access the space. Another is that when the Fire Marshall comes to inspect, she will not be sympathetic to your multi-colored, dream-inspired fiber art if it happens to be blocking the sprinkler system. Interior Design education, in this way, is as much about conforming to regulations as it is about letting your creativity run free. Interior Design Education: The Online Option While changing your current work schedule, or your family's move might you can easily earn a certificate or degree in design online. With several degree types to choose from, Value Colleges has helped you up with a variety of ways to learn more about your passion for palettes, or your excitement for decorated exit signs. In the following Top 25 Online Interior Design Programs we have included single courses, certificates, bachelor's programs, and even one Doctor of Interior Design program. Most of these programs are available through distance learning; however, we chose to include a couple programs innovative programs that required on-campus participation. While Interior Design is often offered as an on-campus option, offering students studio time and foam board for 3D modeling, online options also exist at every level of design education. The software that every modern designer uses these days is much of the designing work that online courses can teach, along with building codes interpretation, blueprint reading, and courses on color, shape, textile, and design theory. For those very dedicated budding interior designers, the Environmental Design Research Association offers an EDAC Certification, specifically for those engaged in designing spaces for healthcare offices and hospitals. The American Society of Interior Designers also offers awards and scholarships to designers who are engaged in service. The possibilities for this kind of support are nearly endless. Cost: $5555 Degree: Master of Arts in Interior Design Delivery: On campus 2 Rhode Island School of Design, known as RISD (pronounced Riz-dee) to most, was established in 1877. Providence, Rhode Island is home to this designed focused school on 13 acres of land. They are located at the edge of what is known as College Hill and is neighboring the campus of Brown University. The two schools share many resources including social events as well as some shared academic courses. The US News and World Report frequently ranks them first among the top excellent art schools, above the School of Art Institute of Chicago and Yale University. RISD is a member of the Association of Independent Colleges of Art and Design. RISD is known for being one of the best interior design schools in the world. Through their continuing education program, they also offer an online interior design degree and certificate. This offering includes an extensive Interior Architecture program where students can achieve a Bachelor's in Fine Arts or achieve one of two master's programs. One of the Master's programs is geared towards students who are already established in the field professionally, and the course of study centers Adaptive Reuse. RISD also has a certificate program in interior design through their Continuing Studies Program. This is a unique program that focuses on reuse as a form of architectural and design practice. Cost: $5555 Degrees: Bachelor's in Fine Arts in Interior Architecture, MFA Interior Architecture for designers, and MFA in Interior Architecture with a focus on Adaptive Reuse Delivery: Hybrid 3 The UCLA Extension was established in 1917, as a part of the University of California Los Angeles and University of California Systems, though they are and always have been financially self-supporting. Their classes take place in downtown Los Angeles and locations scattered throughout Los Angeles County, including Torrance. They are headquartered in Westwood, in a towering building that can hold all that students need. The Western Association of Schools and Colleges fully accredits all extension programs. They have over 5 thousand course offerings and 100 certificate programs. One of the ways they are most famous is by their volume of Emmy, Grammy, and Oscar-winning alumni that have emerged from their Entertainment Studies program. The UCLA Extension offers a program that can act as the first step on the journey to achieve a Master's degree in Interior Architecture. This program, called Foundation Level Interior Design, is perfect for those who are investigating if they are interested in a career in design or not. Other prospective students might already be working as interior designers with interest in updating their skills. This course of study includes a total of 18 classes that include a historical perspective on environmental arts, the foundational of commercial residential and office architecture, and how to use interior drafting and drawings has the perfect design concepts. Read on to complete the certificate program, with a B or better, and already have a bachelor's degree in tow that is eligible for the advanced coursework leading to the Master's program. Cost: $5555 Degree: Graduate Interior Design Certificate Delivery: Online 4 The University of California Berkeley Extension was founded in 1891, as a platform for continuing education for students and community members. Many people turn to this aspect of the UC Berkeley when they are interested in changing careers, interested in developing a new skill set, investing in courses to move up in a current career, or for personal enrichment and lifelong learning. Many classes have the option of studying online, with a traditional classroom experience where students can meet at one of their three locations including Belmont, Downtown San Francisco, and Downtown Berkeley. All instructors are professionals in their field and have a plethora of experience to contribute. The UC Berkeley Extension offers a Certificate Program in Interior Design and Interior Architecture. Students will learn the ins and outs of creating beautiful and functional interior spaces. Each student will undergo coursework that synthesizes design theory and history with studio classes. Students will also engage with digital and manual drawing skills, while effectively learning to communicate their ideas visually. Students will gain all of the necessary competencies to qualify for the California Council of Interior Design Certification Exam (IDEX), as well as the National Council for Interior Design Qualification Exam (NCIDQE). A bachelor's degree in any field is a prerequisite requirement for the program. Cost: $5555 Degree: Certificate in Interior Design and Interior Architecture Delivery: Online 5 The New School Parsons School of Design is generally referred to as merely "Parsons." It is a private art and design based institution of higher learning that is situated in the Greenwich Village neighborhood of New York City, New York. They are consistently ranked among the best interior design schools in the world. It was established in 1896 by artist William Merritt Chase who was seeking avenues for the development of individual artistic expression. It was one of the first postsecondary in the country to offer programming explicitly in interior design, graphic design, and advertising. They have a wide range of offerings including design and design studies, fashion design, and urban ecologies, textiles, architectural design, and curatorial studies. As a component of the Parsons School of Design Strategies (SDS), Parsons School of Design offers a Master's of Science in Strategic Design and Management Program. Students have the option of tackling the program as an online interior design degree, or they can participate entirely on campus, or choose a blended format. This course of study is unique in that it emphasizes design from an interdisciplinary framework. Some students might be business professionals who are interested in investigating challenges of business through the lens of design, while other students might be design oriented and interested in gleaning the necessary leadership and business skills to transform the global economy. Cost: $5555 Degree: Master of Science in Strategic Design and Management Delivery: Online/Hybrid 6 Chatham University was established in 1869, with the original name Pennsylvania Female College. Upon their original foundation, they were located in the Berry Mansion, which is in the Shadyside section of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. They have maintained their Eastside campus at the where the East Liberty neighborhood and Shadyside come together, which sits on 39 acres of land. They also have an Eden Hall campus, which is situated in Pittsburgh's Pine suburb. Their total student enrollment includes just over 1,000 undergraduate students and nearly 1,100 graduate students. They are fully accredited by the Middle States Commission on Higher Education. Chatham University offers many opportunities for students to achieve their goals with a flexible academic structure. They offer an online interior design degree program that can also be taken with a hybrid model or on campus, depending on the student's needs and interests. The program is a Master's of Science program in Interior Architecture that focuses on design theory, as well as a variety of building types. This course of study also emphasizes critical thinking skills, teaching, and research. This 30 credit program Master's program can be completed in under one year of full-time study, though students that require flexibility have the option of completing it on a part-time basis. Cost: $5555 Degree: Master of Science program in Interior Architecture Delivery: Hybrid 7 Savannah College of Art and Design is often referred to as SCAD and was established in 1978. When they first began holding classes, they offered only eight majors. In 1982 the enrollment grew to over 500 students, and their programming began to grow also. As of 2014, they had an enrollment that exceeded 11,000 students. Their campus sits in the heart of Savannah, Georgia, with an additional location in Atlanta. They also have a location in Hong Kong that grants degrees, and a study abroad location in Lacoste, France. They have become known as one of the best interior design schools in the world, and are rated number one by DesignIntelligence. SCAD is fully and consistently accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. SCAD is known for online interior design degree offerings, including three distinct degree programs. Their Bachelor of Fine Arts program includes 180 hours of study, at least 10 of which are dedicated to student electives. They also offer a Master of Arts in Interior Design that requires 45 credit hours, and their terminal degree is the MFA in Interior Design, which includes 90 credit hours, and has the effect of credentialing graduates to teach at the collegiate level. All of SCADs programs emphasize critical thinking skills along with collaborative teamwork, communication, and of course the ins and outs of creating beautiful and functional spaces. Cost: $5555 Degrees: Bachelor of Fine Arts, Master of Arts in Interior Design, MFA in Interior Design Delivery: Hybrid 8 Clary Sage College was established in 2004 by Teresa Knox, who is a champion of career-oriented education. Knox came from a long line of Oklahomans and was working as a dental assistant when she started a program to train students like herself who are interested in becoming dental assistants. Her vision is what created Clary Sage College, which boasts a mission to educate students in comprehensive career-oriented education. They have since become a non-profit institution, and Theresa Knox is no longer the CEO. Instead, she serves on the Executive Board of Higher Education. Their campus is located in the middle of Tulsa, Oklahoma. Clary Sage College offers a 15-month Interior Design Program that culminates in a diploma. This can be completed as an online interior design degree. Students will engage in the foundations of Residential and Commercial Design, Color Theory, Drafting for Interior Design, 3D Imaging, Small Business Marketing, AutoCAD, Furniture Design, Lighting, and Space Planning and Textiles. Graduates will be prepared to work in the field of interior design for residential and commercial spaces. The program embeds many networking opportunities for students to have career leads even before they graduate. Clary Sage College has financial aid and scholarship opportunities that apply to many students who enroll. Cost: $5555 Degree: Associate of Applied Science in Interior Design Delivery: Online 9 The Nebraska State Legislature established the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1869, just two years after the state achieved statehood. Over the last 150 years, the school has not wavered on many essential values identified during the initial charter. The most of these are Nebraska-Lincoln's commitment to education for all. In the early days, this meant that students could study there regardless of race, gender, class, or parents occupation. Now, this means a generous and inclusive commitment to financial aid and student access to resources. The Lincoln campus is the flagship campus of the University of Nebraska system. Currently, they offer coursework within their eight distinct colleges. Their entire student enrollment is just over 25,000 including undergraduates, graduates, and postgraduates. The University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Architecture offers a Master's of Science in Architecture with a specialization in Interior Design. This is an online interior design degree that can be completed with 36 credit hours in two or three years, depending on the students desire to study full or part-time. Each student has the opportunity to tailor their program to their unique needs and career goals with the help of an advisor. Another offering specific offering that comes with this program is the opportunity for students to learn to design spaces for aging adults by achieving a dual certificate in Interior Design and Gerontology. Cost: $5555 Degree: Master of Science in Architecture Delivery: Online 10 Colorado State University is a public school founded in 1870. They are located in Fort Collins, just at the foot of Rocky Mountains, about an hour north of Denver, Colorado. Colorado State is also called CSU by many, and offers more than 150 degrees, with graduate programs in education, business, and engineering, as well as Biomedical Sciences and the College of Veterinary Medicine. Many important inventions and discoveries have come out of the labs at CSU. Hence, it is considered one of the leading research universities. Graduates of CSU at any level have the advantage of having access to some of the most cutting-edge and resourced projects designed to advance health and wellness, as well as function, design, and aesthetics in the country. Colorado State University offers an Evidence-Based Design Graduate Certificate program that falls under the category of an online interior design degree. This course of study teaches students to research and construct designs that enable people to have positive responses to the built world around them. Evidence-based design means there is a greater focus on research rather than intuition when building spaces that respond to a client's needs. This particular program synthesizes both science and art, giving students the fundamental skills to create designs that deliver practical and aesthetically pleasing designs. This program will put students in an excellent position to achieve their EDAC Certification, or create a project for the Environmental Design Research Association (EDRA) Core Award. Cost: $5555 Degree: Evidence-Based Design Graduate Certificate (Medical Building Design) Delivery: Online 11 Sanford University first began holding classes in 1841 as a private Christian institution. It was initially established with the name Howard College and is the 87th oldest college or university in the country. Located in Homewood, Alabama, which is a suburb of Birmingham. As a private religious institution in the south, they were behind the times of desegregation, but they admitted their first African American student in 1967, which sparked a new wave of integration. Currently, they have over 166 undergraduate courses of study. Most of their classes have fewer than 20 students. The US News and World Report ranked them third in the South for Regional Universities. Total enrollment is close to 5,500 students. Sanford University offers an online interior design degree program that culminates in a Master's of Science in Design Studies (MSDS). This particular course of study gives students the tools to research the area of design interests and expertise. This degree can support an academic career in design education, among other possible avenue. Critical thinking and analysis are emphasized in the program as well as research that is used for transformative design solutions. The program requires 24 months of rigorous study that supports design, reserch, and teaching. The program infuses faith-based learning into the curriculum to promote lifelong learning. Cost: $5555 Degree: Master's of Science in Design Studies Delivery: Online 12 Ball State University was established in 1918. They are a public institution of higher learning situated in Muncie, Indiana on a campus with 1,140 acres of land. They have two satellite campuses in the towns of Indianapolis and Fishers. They were founded by the Ball Brothers who were industrialists who also founded the Ball Corporation. The Carnegie Classification of Higher Education has classified them as having a Doctoral Institution that conducts a Higher Level of Research Activity. The institution is comprised of eight distinct colleges. Their total student enrollment is nearing 23,000 students. They offer over 400 clubs and student life organizations on campus. Ball State University offers an online interior design degree program that culminates in a Master's in Interior Design. This course of study was designed to optimally give students the foundations necessary for becoming a competent interior designer. The coursework is rigorous, and the pace is quick with classes the stress research and theory and focuses on topics such as environmental psychology, design theory, accessibility, ergonomics, graphic communication skills, as well as cultural and functional needs. The online format enables students to study when their schedule allows. With a bachelor's degree and full-time study, this program can be completed in 2 years; otherwise, students can complete the program in three years time. Cost: $5555 Degree: Master's in Interior Design Delivery: Online 13 Goddard College is a private low-residency model undergraduate and graduate college. The campus is located in Plainfield, Vermont, 20 miles east of the state capital of Montpelier. Students at Goddard College are a leading edge in the field of design, and are committed to teaching, and research. This program is designed to help people learn to practice, and prepare a thesis built on the work in the program and personal research interests. Students will learn how to plan and implement a design curriculum for undergraduate students, and they are most interested in knowing, within the parameters of their degree. Dewey also believed that education is a moral concern, therefore a Goddard education comes along with the requirement that students learn a great deal about themselves in the process. The Plainfield, Vermont campus is littered with buildings designed and built by students in the since retired architecture and design programs. Funky buildings that reflect the Goddard philosophies of balancing teamwork and individual creative exploration. The MFA in Interdisciplinary Arts at Goddard College is a student-centered degree, which teaches art as a transformational practice. With guidance from artist faculty, MFA students will complete coursework that is within their chosen area of study. The MFA is a self-directed degree and, as such, is best suited for students who have a background in Interior Design as a practice before enrolling. Students will be expected to complete coursework and self-guided studio work, submitting artwork as well as written coursework over the five-semester, 60-credit terminal degree program. There is a mandatory 9-day residency that begins each semester on the Plainfield, VT campus, or the sister campus at Port Townsend, Washington. Cost: $5555 Degree: MFA in Interdisciplinary Arts and Design Delivery: Hybrid/Low Residency 14 Brenau University is a private university that was established in 1878. Their primary campus is situated in Gainesville, Georgia, with additional campuses scattered throughout the state in Augusta, Fairburn, Norcross, and two in Atlanta Metro region. Total enrollment is close to 3,500 students annually. They have a range of degree offerings from Associate's degrees to doctorate programs. Their curriculum is geared to support professional programming and career development with a strong liberal arts foundation. The US News and World Report has ranked Brenau among the top 15 best higher education values in the Southeast for six years in a row. Brenau University offers an online interior design degree.
